EDUCATION

Persons applying for a position for which a college or university credential is required must have earned that credential at a regionally accredited institution or its equivalent.

Applicants who have a legitimate credential from any institution which is not part of the U.S. regional accreditation system will be evaluated on a case by case basis related to appropriate course work and research scholarship required for the degree.

No applicant will be hired who has obtained, and used as a valid credential, any degree not recognized by accredited higher education institutions because it was obtained through a so-called "diploma mill."

An employee may be terminated for failure to disclose on the OCC employment application any "diploma mill" degree obtained.
